Description

Reevesville is one of those delightful Old South Railroad stops. Although the passengers and famous Pullman Cars are long gone, some of the original 19th century architecture still exists. The majority of Pullman Porters came from St. George, SC. It was a father and son enterprise. Travel back in time and create a wonderful Bed and Breakfast, or just create your own private getaway. Reevesville is a friendly town. If you want to live life a little bit slower, safer, and only 5 minutes to I-95. If the term "Be Back" suits you, Welcome Home! The primary home is an awesome one-story structure, built in 1890. A few finishing touches and you are there. New swimming pool recently installed. The remnants of a 19th century 1880 boarding house still exist. The entire property is 3.92 Acres. Plenty of room to stretch out and plan your next project. You could rebuild the home or have an endless supply of clear heart pine and long floor and ceiling timbers. Either way you win.
