Description

Some homes are built to check boxes. 167 Laurel Oak was built to make an impression. As Hunter Quinn's former model home, this residence was finished with a level of detail, craftsmanship, and hand-selected finishes that truly set it apart from the production homes in the surrounding areas. From the moment you arrive, this home announces itself differently. A full stacked-stone facade, dark-stained tongue-and-groove porch ceiling, black lantern pendants, and a beautiful glass-panel front door create an entrance that immediately feels special. Inside, the attention to detail continues. Hardwood-style LVP flooring flows seamlessly throughout the entire main level, complemented by craftsman trim, arched doorways, smooth ceilings, and elegant tray details. Just off the foyer, a private office behind double glass doors with transom windows provides a quiet and sophisticated workspace. The kitchen is truly the heart of the home and was designed for both everyday living and entertaining. It features a Samsung gas cooktop and proper hood, wall oven with pan drawer, built-in microwave, quartz countertops, full pantry, and an oversized island anchored by a beautiful Kohler farmhouse sink. A hand-scraped tile backsplash adds just the right amount of character, while the spacious casual dining area comfortably accommodates eight to ten guests. The kitchen opens directly to the family room, where a gas-log fireplace creates a warm focal point and connects naturally to the screened porch. With its dark tongue-and-groove ceiling, the screened porch provides a comfortable extension of the living space and makes indoor-outdoor entertaining effortless. The main-level primary suite offers privacy and separation from the rest of the home. The luxurious en-suite bath features a full-tile shower, soaking tub, double vanity, and a spacious walk-in closet with a custom closet system already installed. Even the oversized toilet closet includes additional linen storage—a thoughtful detail to top off the primary bathroom. A beautifully appointed powder room with marble vanity and a laundry room featuring patterned encaustic-style tile complete the main level. Upstairs, the home continues to impress with four additional bedrooms, a generous loft, and two full bathrooms. The loft, measuring more than 190 square feet, provides exceptional flexibility for a media room, playroom, game room, gym, or additional living space. Storage is abundant throughout the home, but the oversized garage takes it to another level. Wider than standard and fully climate-controlled with its own dedicated mini-split system, the garage is ready for a workshop, home gym, hobby space, or simply a place where vehicles, tools, and gear can finally have a proper home. Outside, the property was designed for entertaining and enjoying the South Carolina lifestyle. The screened porch opens to a paver walkway that winds through the established landscaping to a stone fire pit surrounded by a circular paver patio. The flat, well-established and fully landscaped yard provides a beautiful and functional outdoor setting that feels like a true extension of the home rather than an afterthought. A brand-new privacy fence has been installed and is ready to provide security for years to come. And then there's the location. The Oaks at Midway amenity center is directly across the street, offering convenient access to the community pool, pickleball courts, and tennis courts. Lake Hartwell is approximately 10 minutes away, and Downtown Anderson, AnMed, Greenville, and Clemson are all just a quick drive. This is more than a spacious five-bedroom home. It is a former builder model that was thoughtfully designed, extensively upgraded, and finished with details that simply aren't found in the typical production home. 167 Laurel Oak is a rare opportunity to own the home that was built to showcase what Hunter Quinn offers! Now, it can be yours.
