Description

Set along a quiet cul-de-sac near the far end of Jack Island, this homesite offers a peaceful setting shaped by preserved landscapes, new neighborhood parks and the natural rhythms of Kiawah River. Here, the road gives way to open green space and winding trails, creating a sense of retreat while keeping the community's most-loved experiences within easy reach. Imagine a home designed to embrace life outdoors, with generous porches for slow mornings, doors opened to the coastal breeze and inviting spaces that flow naturally between inside and out. Just beyond your doorstep, scenic trails connect to more than 20 miles of paths through maritime forest, along tidal waterways and toward the waterfront, parks and gathering places found throughout the community. As one of the few remaining opportunities to build on Jack Island, this homesite offers the freedom to create something distinctly your own within an established neighborhood. Begin the day with a walk beneath the oaks, spend the afternoon beside the riverfront pool at the Spring House, or gather for dinner at The Dunlin before returning to the quiet of home. Tucked toward the edge of the community yet connected to it all, this is a rare opportunity to build a home where nature, community and life along the river come together.
