Club History

WildeWood Country Club began in 1960, when Heath Manning and Darnell Boyd purchased several tracts of land, with acreage totaling about 1600. In 1964, construction on the Russell Breeden-designed golf course commenced, and the first home was built in 1967. The clubhouse was built in 1971.

As an avid polo player, Manning's vision of WildeWood originated with his visit to a subdivision in Memphis, Tennessee, also named WildeWood. The community included polo fields, horse stables, and a golf course and country club. Initially, our WildeWood included not one, but two polo fields.

Woodcreek Farms began in the 1940's as a 2200-acre rural tract that Edwin Cooper, Sr., established as a hunting club for his friends and relatives. The Club comprised of several cabins and cottages built around Woodcreek Lake by Columbians who used them as weekend and vacation homes.

In the early 1990's, Heath Manning partnered with Edwin Cooper, Jr., to develop Woodcreek Farms into an upscale, architecturally controlled golf course community. The developers selected Tom Fazio as the course designer, and encouraged him to utilize his talents with almost total freedom. This resulted in the Woodcreek Farms golf course, which is one of the most touted in the Southeastern United States.

The first home in Woodcreek Farms was built in 1997. Since then, approximately 400 homes have been added, with additional development scheduled over the next twenty-five years.

On January 23, 2009, the members of what was then the Country Club at WildeWood and Woodcreek purchased the Club and renamed it The Members Club at Woodcreek and WildeWood. Purchase of The Members Club at Woodcreek and WildeWood is the culmination of more than a year and a half of due diligence by a group of members. The Club is now owned and operated by its membership.

Today, the approximately 630 members enjoy all the wonderful amenities of two fully-operational campuses. The Board of Directors and Management Staff make every attempt to fulfill the total country club experience for members and their guests.
